ScreenBeam Classroom Commander Wireless Orchestration

for Windows 10 Classrooms with Interactive Touch

Give your teachers the tools they need to succeed.

The modern classroom thrives with interactive learning.

According to the 2015 Gallup Student Poll, Engaged Today—Ready for Tomorrow, three-quarters of fifth graders feel “involved in and enthusiastic about school” but only one-third of eleventh graders feel the same.

Increasing student engagement is a critical objective when planning and implementing personalized, digital learning strategies so all students can achieve their full potential. To help students become lifelong learners who are responsible citizens and able to compete in today's job market, technology integrated in the right way can have a huge impact on student success. The one-to-one ratio classroom—in which each student and teacher are equipped with a device—provides educators the flexibility to supplement core curriculum with interactive online content and digital learning materials to create more highly customized lessons.

Educators also know that students perform better when their teacher moves around the classroom. In fact, as mobile technology progresses, school IT professionals and educators are seeing the benefits of enhanced mobility.

ScreenBeam Classroom Commander creates agile classrooms by giving teacher and students mobility to move freely around the classroom, increasing opportunities to interact, collaborate and create. Designed for Windows 10-equipped classrooms, ScreenBeam Classroom Commander is a classroom orchestration solution that enables great learning outcomes in one-to-one ratio classrooms by combining wireless display connectivity with premium orchestration functionality. Teachers can walk around and interact with students instead of being tied to a computer or a projector, while maintaining complete control of student devices to keep students focused and engaged in the lesson.

Mobility is key for classroom agility, and ScreenBeam Classroom Commander provides that mobility to spark more collaborative and interactive learning environments.

What is classroom agility?

Classroom agility is the ability to quickly and easily move in the classroom, and through that movement quickly observe, assess and respond to dynamics in the classroom. Teachers in an agile classroom are constantly in motion: displaying lessons, monitoring students, answering individual questions, making suggestions, utilizing proximity control and re-tasking those off task. Classroom agility should also apply to students. Students need to feel comfortable moving around the room, collecting resources and collaborating with peers. In this agile learning environment, teachers and students become collaborators, and interactions are made more valuable for learners.

ScreenBeam Classroom Commander helps teachers teach.

Untethers teachers. Move and interact with the lesson being displayed, making it easy to watch student reaction and understanding—without interrupting instruction.

Supports interactive learning. Annotate comments and questions directly onto the student screen from the classroom display—even when student devices are not touch-enabled.

Monitors student devices. View screens and active applications in real time, blank all student screens simultaneously to gain classroom attention, drive URLs across all student screens and send private messages. Teachers ensure that students stay on task and learn at the same pace.

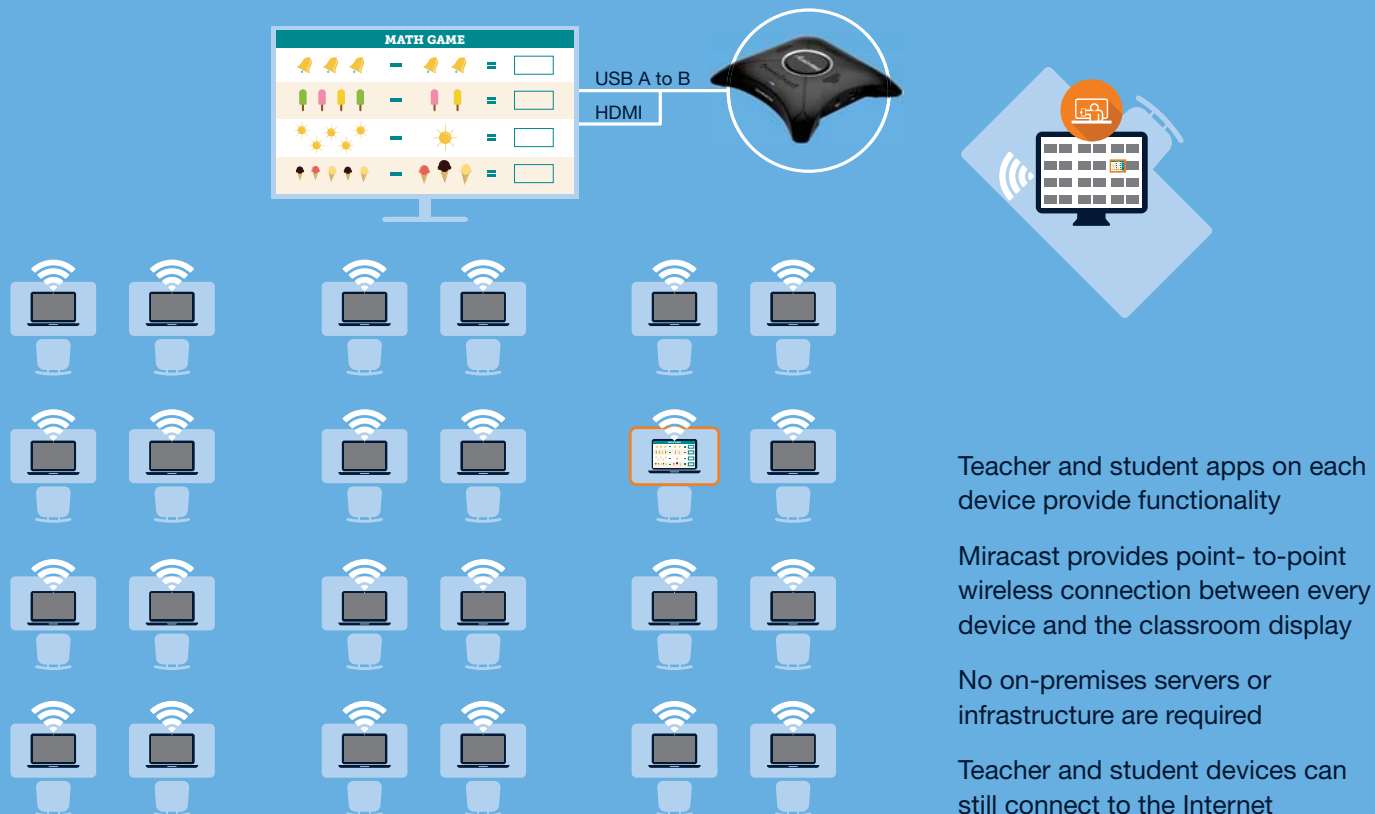

Enables proximity control. Monitor student behavior to identify issues faster and help off-task students refocus, without interrupting instructions.

Makes learning fun. Engage students by supplementing core curriculum with interactive online content and digital learning materials. Popular apps such as Skype in the Classroom, OneNote, FluidMath, Minecraft for Education and LifeLiqe are easier to implement without the constraints of wires.

Gives students confidence. With teacher permission, students can share work right from their desks to avoid the anxiety of standing to deliver it, giving shy students an opportunity to safely participate.

"ScreenBeam changes the dynamics of our classrooms. When both teachers and students can move freely around the classroom, the level of interaction exponentially increases."

—Jason Murray, District Technology Coordinator
Cornwall-Lebanon School District

A wireless environment made easy.

Create an in-room hub for wireless connectivity that is automated, extremely easy to use and optimizes instructional time.

Windows 10 plus ScreenBeam is the only enterprise-class wireless display solution to natively support UIBC wireless touchback.

Miracast™ is the global standard for wireless display technology specifically designed to enable modern devices to connect directly to ScreenBeam and maintain connectivity to the school network for Internet and LAN services. This enables the wireless display functionality, student device monitoring and control to happen off the school network, eliminating the heavy bandwidth impact of traditional student device monitoring and the extraordinary costs to add dedicated servers to support the application. The result is IT administrators get a very streamlined, easy-to-implement solution for wireless connectivity that saves valuable resources.

Within this wireless environment, teachers can interact with the content on the student display, using the classroom interactive display via touchback. By connecting the USB cable from the touch screen or interactive projector to the USB input on the ScreenBeam receiver, teachers are untethered from the display while maintaining all the benefits of an interactive touch screen display. For example, students can display work from their desks, and while the teacher provides constructive feedback on the touch screen using the digital ink tools in Windows, those annotations are instantly captured and saved on the student screen, even when the student device is not natively touch-enabled.
