Overview

The National Science Teaching Association (NSTA), founded in 1944 and headquartered in Arlington, Virginia, is the largest non-profit organization in the world committed to promoting excellence and innovation in science teaching and learning for all. NSTA publishes 4 monthly journals, multiple book series, and provides professional learning experiences at the school, district, and state level, as well as at five yearly conferences. NSTA's current membership of more than 50,000 includes science teachers, science supervisors, administrators, scientists, business and industry representatives, and others involved in and committed to science education. No single, comprehensive program for addressing the integration of science and literacy within the framework of the Science Standards currently exists within the science education market. The NSTA can offer a suite of materials and services, that taken together, can supplement K-12 science instruction.
